INTERDISCIPLINARY AREAS

Business, Economics and Management

The focus of the area is aimed at deepening economic studies, in particular in Business and Management of the distinctive features of the female universe - intuition, sensitivity, predisposition to relationships, flexibility, sense of "social" - as part of entrepreneurship, organization, communication and management business.

Historical-politics

The focus of the historical and political area aims, in particular, to reconstruct the dynamics of Italian, European and non-European countries, which in the last two centuries have marked the slow but steady process of emancipation of women, both in her public dimension than in her private life.

Sociological-psychological-pedagogical

This area will focus on the women condition in the contemporary world: i.e. the roles that society attributes to them - namely mother and worker (often conflicting) -, the social representations that affect women perception and self-perception, as well as the production and acceptance processes of these representations.

Statistics and Quantitative Methods

The area main focus is on studying gender issues quantitatively. In particular actual research themes are the network gender effects, social networks and gender issues and gender career choice.

Law

The focus of this area is to study gender issues in the perspective of the constitutional program which aims to promote equal opportunities between women and men. The spectrum of investigation, of course, open to the contributions of international and supranational level, involves the many aspects of social life: from the more strictly in the family business, as well as that of political representation.
